'Rabin murder planned two years ago'

TEL AVIV (AFP) - Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's murder was planned as long as two years ago by a Jewish terror cell, with the support of far-right elements determined to hold on to the West Bank, Israel's police chief said. "The murder was planned for two years by a hard core which was circled by a certain number of people who were only partially aware of it." he said in a statement earried by Israeli radio on Friday. He said the file was "almost closed" and that police did not expect more arrests, tollowing the confessions of assassin Yigat Amir and others who have been detained since the murder at a Tel Asis peace rally on Nov. 4. The police are holding seven suspected conspirators, including Amir (see page 12). "It's certain that the murder was perpetrated by a mail terrorist core and not a powerful clandestine organisation ... But that makes it even more worrying for Israeli society," said an expert on far-right groups. "If it was a secret organisation, the security services would not have had much trouble dismantling it." for Ehud Sprinzhak of Jerusalem's Hebrew University told AFP, "But it is difficult to strike when you are dealing with a cluster of small groups or individuals," he said.

King, Crown Prince congratulate Zeroual

AMMAN (Petra) — His Majesty King Hussein Friday sent a cable to Algerian President Liamine Zeroual congratulating him on his victory in his country's first free presidential election. "I and the Jordanian people received with overwhelming joy news about your winning the democratic presidential election in the dear Algeria."
King Hussein said in his cable. "As I wish you luck in your coming presidential mandate, I implore God the Almighty that your free election will be a main step on leading Algeria out of its crisis and retrieving its long-aspired and honourable role within its Arab Nation." the King added. His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan sent President Zeroual a similar cable congratulating him on his win and the Algerian people on the free democratic election. Prince Hassan voiced hope that this democratic election will signal an end to the cycle of violence which plagued Algeria for the past years, and will enable the Arab country to resume its prominent role within its Arab and Islamic nations. President Zeroual beat three other candidates with 61.34 per cent of the vote for a new five-year mandate.

Zeroual sweeps to victory in Algerian presidential polls

Former General Liamine Zeroual swept to victory as Algeria's elected president with results announced on Friday giving him an outright win over his three rivals.

In an election seen by the authorities as the first step to getting Algeria out of four years of bloodshed and conflict with militants, Interior Minister Mustapha Ben Mensour said over seven millionof 12 million voters backed Mr. Zeroual.

The newly-elected president, speaking shortly after the result, said: "The elections were a victory to the sovereignty of the people and true democracy in our country and a Jesson to its enemies inside and outside Algeria."

Peres surges far ahead of Netanyahu in opinion poll

TEL AVIV (Agencies) — Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres has raced ahead of his main right-wing Likud rival Benjamin Netanyahu winning 60 per cent support in a poli published Friday. Mr. Netanyahu would poll only 28 per cent of the vote if elections were held now while 12 per cent said they had not made up their minds. according to the poll of 500 people published in the right-

The figures are up on last week when Mr. Peres was backed by 54 per cent of people questioned for a poll in the daily Yediot Aharonot. with the Likud leader gaining 23 per cent support.

Mr. Netanyahu's popularity has plunged since the assassination of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Nov. 4. After the murder he was publicly criticised for whipping up a hate campaign against Mr. Rabin. Three months ago Mr. Rabin and Mr. Netanyahu were neck and neck in the polls. The next general elections are due to be held on Oct. 29. 1996, when for the first time the prime minister is due to be directly elected.

Mr. Peres was officially appointed prime minister late Wednesday by President Ezer Weizman and is due to announce his new cabinet line-up on Tuesday.

"Tuesday, on the eve of presenting my cabinet, I will say everything I have to say." Mr. Peres told journalists as he went into a meeting of the Labour Party leadership in Tel Aviv. But he added: "I am not sure that I will be able to enlarge the base of the government.

A Labour spokesman said the new cabinet members would be sworn in before the Knesset, or parliament, on Wednesday.

Several ministers were trying to broaden the slim base of the outgoing left-wing coalition, which could only count on 63 deputies in the 120-set parliament.

Outgoing Police Minister Moshe Shahal, Justice Minister David Libai, Tourism Minister Uzi Baram, Economy Minister Yossi Beilin, and Labour Secretary General Nissim Zwili led the rallying call contacting several parties.

Mr. Weizman said on Wednesday: "I believe we need a government as broad as possible because the greater the support, the more able he will be to take courageous decisions."

But the head of the Labour parliamentary group Raanam Cohen, ruled out a national unity government. "There is absolutely no question of

Palestinians accuse Israelis of interfering in voter campaign

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian officials complained Thursday that Israeli soldiers were interfering with efforts to register voters for upcoming elections in the West Bank and Gaza.

Feras Yaghi, head of a registration centre in Hebron, told the Associated Press that armed soldiers collected personal data from at least 25 families in the area claiming it was a registration. "This is a disturbance of our work," he said.

In addition, a group of Palestinian school teachers among some 7,000 carrying out the registration drive said they were prevented by soldiers from reaching a balloting centre in Hebron.

Apart from their membership of the PFLP, they were accused of making the explosives and throwing them at military vehicles.

Japanese soldiers set to arrive on Golan

BEIRUT (AFP) - Japan is to send a unit of 35 soldiers to join U.N. peacekeepers on the Golan Heights "very soon," a Japanese official said during a visit to Lebanon on Thursday. The unit will replace a Canadian contingent of the Damascus-based U.N. disengagement observer force on the Golan Heights, said Kojiro Takano, head of Japan's International Cooperation Bureau. Japan decided in August to take part in the U.N. mission for a period of two years starting in February. The scope and timetable of an Israeli withdrawal on the Golan, as well as the accompanying security arrangements, are the main stumbling-blocks in peace talks between the Jewish state and Syria.

Yemen arrests 15, seizes arms, explosives

ADEN (AP) - Authorities in Yemen on Thursday arrested 10 people, seizing arms and explosives they allegedly planned to use in attacks on economic and touristic sites. Anti-government leaflets and pornographic material were also found in their possession, a security official said. The official, who declined to be named, said authorities last week arrested a group of five men who also had explosives in their possession. The official said both groups worked for southern Yemenis who have lived in exile abroad since their bid to secede was crushed by the northern-based Yemeni army last year.

Greek-Cypriot shot after in buffer zone

NICOSIA (AFP) — Turkish-Cypriots shot and wounded a Greek-Cypriot who burst through the island's buffer zone in a car in a bid to return to his home village after 20 years, the Turkish-Cypriot news agency TAK said Friday. It said Yiannis Apostolides crossed the green line which has divided the island since 1974 in a four-wheel vehicle on Thursday and ignored warnings to stop before Turkish-Cypriot forces shot him. He was being given medical treatment and would later be questioned, the agency said. Mr. Apostolides first drove through a Greek-Cypriot barrage on the other side, to the east of Nicosia. He told guards, "I want to go to my village," Greek-Cypriot newspapers said. The incident follows tension on the island after Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot rival demonstrators hurled rocks at each other on Wednesday, the anniversary of a 1983 declaration of a breakaway Turkish republic of northern Cyprus. A Greek-Cypriot soldier, George Karotasakis, has been detained since Nov. 3 when he crossed the buffer zone to smoke a cigarette with Turkish-Cypriot forces. His detention sparked the angry demonstrations. The Greek-Cypriots have called on the U.N. peacekeeping force on the island to help secure the return of both men.

Women candidates in Egyptian elections steer clear of adopting platform on rights

CAIRO (AFP) - Women candidates in Egypt's parliamentary elections have decided that a rights platform is a losing ticket and are instead focusing on the issue of poverty.

The 4,000 candidates running in the vote set for Nov. 29 include only 35 women: seven from the ruling National Democratic Party (NDP), seven from opposition ranks.

and the rest independents. "If I run on women's rights, I'm sure to lose." Sawassan Al Kilani, an NDP member running for reelection in Ismailiyya, north of Cairo, told AFP.

"The key problems for women are first of all poverty and unemployment, not whether to ban ploygamy or easy divorces," said Ms. Kilani, who has served 20 years in parliament.

"The question of democracy is secondary compared to the problems of hunger. housing, drinking water and medical care. from which women suffer most," said Fathiya Al Assal, a Marxist candidate in the Cairo slum of Imbaba.

Even an issue such as illiteracy - from which an average 65 per cent or adult women suffer compared to 34 per cent of adult men - is seen as "relatively minor," said Laila Hassan, an independent.

"When people are dying of hunger, just try to run a campaign against illiteracy or to talk of subjects like the right to give citizenship to children of Egyptian women married to foreigners," Ms.

Hassan said. "There are other more pressing issues." "Poverty is a real problem." said Laila Abdul Wahab, who is standing as an independent in the rural area of Banha, north of Cairo.

"Fifty per cent of children leave school because they don't have the means to buy books and paper. The policy of compulsory education isn't enough if free education is not guaranteed," Ms. Abdul

"The low participation of intellectuals (as candidates) and the failure of the middleclass to register to vote means that most voters are poor," she said.

"Since competition is so fierce, women have to chose social topics and exclude any reference to democracy or legislative reforms" women's rights, Ms. Abdul Wahab said.

Rawya Atiya, who in 1956 became Egypt and the Arab World's first woman deputy, was sorry that "women's representation in parliament is in decline in Egypt. The Egyptian woman has not been able to hold on to her rights."

parliament varied from six to eight until 1979 when former President Anwar Al Sadat ordered 32 seats set aside for them. But the quota was later ruled unconstitutional and

The last parliament included 10 women, three of them were appointed by the president, who names 10 of fthe body's 454 seats.

"We women have the easiest and most direct contact with voters," Ms. Assal said. "In Egypt every home's doors are open to a woman, which is not always the case

But women candidates must also face the opposition of Islamic radicals who tear down their posters and break up their meetings, shouting slogans such as, "cursed is a community led by a woman. a quote from the Prophet Mohammad.

Fill in Suez Canal and build a railway line — candidate

CAIRO (AFP) - A candidate in Egypt's parliamentary elections called for the Suez Canal to be filled in because of falling revenues and a railway line built in its place, the opposition weekly Al Arabi reported on Thursday.

Abdul Ati Sayad, an independent candidate from the canal town of Fayed said:

"New alternatives to the canal must be considered" after "the lowering in its earnings due to the alternative use of the Sumed oil pipeline and the threat of numerous Israeli projects to replace it."

The Sumed line carries oil from the Red Sea to the Mediterranean, the same route as the canal.

Israeli proposals of building a canal from the Red Sea to the Dead Sea have often been condemned in the Egyptian press as a bid by the Jewish state to bankrupt the canal with an alternative sea route to the Mediterranean. "After filling in the canal. a modern train line could be established to carry merchandise, oil, silk and fabrics" between the two seas, Mr. Sayad said. •

Mr. Sayad said the canal was a Zionist project which aimed to separate Egypt from the Sinai," pointing out that its digging, completed in 1869, "coincided with the beginning of the Zionist project in Palestine."

The architect of the canal, Ferdinand de Lesseps, "was a Zionist agent," he added.
The Suez Canal Agency

(SCA) lowered passage rates for oil tankers 20 per cent starting this month to attract customers back to the canal where traffic dipped 10 per cent for the first half of 1995.

An SCA official blamed the lower traffic on Sumed, which is 50-per cent owned by Egypt, while Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates split ownership of the rest.

Egypt's legislative elec-tions are set for Nov. 29.

Queen opens Jordan River Designs' annual autumn exhibition

AMMAN (J.T.) — Her Majesty Queen Noor Thursday opened Jordan River Designs' (JRD) annual autumn exhibition "Khawater" (Thoughts) at JRD's showroom located in a renovated 1930's stone house in Jabal Amman, a Royal Court statement said.

The "Khawater" exhibition features, for the first time, hand-embroidered bed linens, duvet covers, bath towels, table clothes, office accessories, handbags, mosaic-inspired wall hangings, quilts decorated with Islamic Arabesque designs and shirts sporting contemporary Jordanian motifs symbolising Petra, Jerash and Ajloun, the statement said.

Queen Noor expressed her pride at JRD's high quality craftsmanship, evident in their 4,300 briefcases and folders that were distributed at the Middle East and North Africa Economic Summit by the Royal Court's International Press Office and the summit's organisers, the statement

JRD was established in 1987 by Save the Children Fund in collaboration with the Noor Al Hussein Foundation (NHF). The aim of this project was to provide underprivileged urban women in East Amman with income-generating opportunities that are sensitive to their social and cultural beliefs and are environment-friendly.

Since its inception, 1,584 women have participated and received JD 358,564 in wages, while more than 900 beneficiaries have been trained in production techniques and business management skills. Through partial funding from the National Design and Trade Centre and Jordan Export Development and Commercial Centres Corporation, JRD has participated in several international trade shows in Berlin, Paris, Frankfurt and Japan.

Save the Children is the process of transferring this project to a Jordanian charitable society that will be presided over by Princess Rania Abdullah Queen Noor was received by HRH Princess Rania Abdullah, Project Manager Hana Mitri Shahin, the women beneficiaries, the JRD staff and designers.

Workshop to look at environment education

AMMAN (J.T.) - The Jordan Environment Society (JES) and the Friedrich Naumann Foundation (FNF) will jointly organise a workshop under the title "Environmental Education in Case Studies," Friedrich-Naumann Foundation statement said. The function will take place in Ma'in during the period of November 19-23, the statement said.

The workshop, which is held within the National Environmental Information and Education Programme (NEIEP), aims at developing communicators' capacities in the field of environment and training the trainers, according to the state-

The 30 participants come from the newly elected municipalities, political parties, women organisations, JES newly established branches and the media.

According to the statement, the workshop will provide the participants with a solid knowledge about the national and global state of the environ-

The participants will then be introduced to techniques to enable them to maximise participation and integration in group work.

The participants will be exposed to environmental case studies on which they will work to find proper solutions and later present their results.

The workshop is one of NEIEP's activities which it uses to promote environmental awareness and create nationwide environmental movements, the statement said.

King, Queen attend Mayo Clinic satellite link-up ceremony

AMMAN (J.T.) - Their Majesties King Hussein and Queen Noor Thursday attended a ceremony for the satellite link-up between Mayo Clinic in Rochester, the United States and two hospitals here, the King Hussein Medical Centre and the Amman Surgical Hospital.

In a brief address at the ceremony held at the King Hussein Medical Centre which included a live satellite interaction session and opening speeches by physicians in Amman and the Mayo Clinic, King Hussein thanked the responsible authorities on both sides for the link-up.

"It is a great pleasure for us to converse at this point in time. This is a very important link in our common endeavours to serve our people and serve humanity," the King said.

"I am very proud to be here with you today and very happy to have reached this point, a beginning of what is to come in our cooperation," he added.

"I am very happy with this new start and this new development which is great in size and its objectives and wish you continued success, which is a success for all of us, and we are proud to be partners in

The joint venture will also provide Jordanian doctors with special status at Mayo Clinic in the United States as well as doctors and medical students with a chance to receive new medical information first hand.

Police arrest 2 suspects in shop murder

By Rana Husseini Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN - Police Thursday apprehended two suspects in connection with the stabbing of a 20-year-old man last Saturday in his grocery shop in Jabal Amman, official sources said. "A witness who was also robbed at knife point was able to give police a good description of the assailants, and later when they (the suspects) were arrested, he was able to identify them in a police line-un," Khaled Darwish, the prosecutor general investigating the crime, said.

Rabi' Tawfiq Odeh, owner of Al Tawfiq Grocery Shop in Yousef Izzedin Street near the Third Circle, was stabbed three times in the back and chest. The assailant/s robbed the' victim of less than JD 20.

Mr. Darwish told the Jordan Times Thursday that two men aged 22 and 24, both with previous records, confessed to and re-enacted the crime. The motive behind the murder was theft, Mr. Darwish added.

"Both men were planning to rob the store that night and were monitoring the area. One of them approached the store pretending to buy a drink but really intending to check if there was any money in the cash drawer," Mr. Darwish said.

When the suspect saw cash in the drawer he waved to his friend, then asked Mr. Odel. for an item on the top shelf behind the sales counter. When Mr. Odeh turned his back, the suspect stabbed him once in the back, said the prosecutor general.

"Mr. Odeh ran inside to the storage room instead of running outside, and the 24-year-old assailant followed him inside and stabber him again twice in the chest," he add

During that time, he added, a customer (the witness) entered the shop and asked for Mr. Rabi', The witness said he was threatened by the assailant who demanded that he give him his money (JD 50).

The assailants then fled the scene. Mr. Rabi', the son of the owner of the grocery, died shortly after the stabbing. Meanwhile, a 30-year-old man, identified as Sami K., who was arrested last Tuesday in connection with the shooting death of his brother-in-law is said to have killed Ashraf Rawhi S., 27, because he refused to attend the suspect's wedding, family sources said Thursday.

Mr. Rawhi was married to Sami's sister.

He was shot once in the back of the head by his brother-in-law, the sources

"He (Sami) was to be wed Tuesday night and he wanted Ashraf to attend his wedding, but they had family... problems, and the victim refused. After a heated argument Sami drew a gun and shot Ashraf while he had his back turned," sources told the Jordan Times. The shooting occurred in Sami's photo studio, called Paris, in Sweifieh.

The victim, a father of a one-yearold daughter, was laid to rest Thursday, the family said. The suspect was apprehended by the authorities shortly after committing the crime. The following day he confessed and re-enacted the crime, official sources said.

Woman sentenced to 1 year for murder of attacker

By Rana Husseini Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — The Criminal Court Thursday sentenced a 32-year-old woman to one year in prison for the murder of a man who, after sexually harassing her, assaulted her in March.

Fatmeh Salem, a Zarqa resident, who pleaded not guilty, benefited from a penalty reduction because the court decided that the woman was acting in self defence and protecting her honour, presiding Judge Abdul Ruhman Tawfiq told the court room. According to court documents, Ms. Salem, a housewife and the mother of three children, killed Adel

Mohammad, a Sudani national, on March 8, in her house in Wadi Hajar area in Zarqa after he repeatedly expressed sexual intentions towards her.

The documents said that the victim lived close to the woman's house and that he repeatedly made sexual advances to her, "since her husband was a truck driver and was away from home very often."

On the night of the murder, the court said, the victim went to Ms. Salem's house at a late hour and knocked on the door.

One of her children opened the door and Mohammad forced his way into the house, the document added.

Mohammad then pro-ceeded to assault Ms. Salem, beating her and hitting her head against the case, wall, according to the court document.

The woman managed to escape to the kitchen where she grabbed a knife and demanded that the victim to leave the house. "But he refused and ran towards her, and she stabbed him in the chest," the court document said.

The court said that the woman then asked one of her children to call for an ambulance, but then she decided to take the victim to the hospital by taxi.

Mohammad died shortly after arriving to hospital. The woman then turned herself in, the document added. On Nov. 5, in a similar case, a 25-year-old Kafarangeh woman was sentenced to seven and a half years in prison for the murder of a man who sexually harassed her.

Hanan Adnan, first received 15 years with hard labour, but the sentence was reduced to seven and a half years, benefiting from a penalty reduction because she had been sexually harassed.

The court's decision was based on the fact that on the night of the murder the victim, Mousa Hussein, did not physically attack Ms. Adnan, but only threatened her verbally.

King orders removal of statue

By Rana Husseini Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — His Majesty King Hussein has decided to have removed a statue of himself which was erected in the front garden of the Prime Ministry last week because it contravenes Islamic Sharia, a source at the Royal Court told the Jordan Times Friday.

The 7.5 metre-high statue, built by North Korean artists who were commissioned by the Amman Municipality, was brought down from its pedestal at dawn Thursday.

"We have asked Chief Islamic Justice Sheikh Izzeddin Al Khatib Al Tamimi for his opinion and he said the statue contradicts Islam, so His Majesty ordered its removal," the source said.

Reuters Thursday quoted an Amman municipality official as saying that King Hussein ordered the statue to be carted away "because (the King) was unhappy with it."

The two-tonne copper statue was the Amman Municipality's idea to be presented to the King, marking his 60th birthday. It took six months to complete, at a cost of JD 30,000, a source said.

The statue was to have been unveiled in an official ceremony on Thursday.

Britain frees N.Ireland prisoners

BELFAST (R) — Britain freed over 80 Catholic and Protestant prisoners Friday under new rules to reward 15-month guerrilla ceasefires and keep alive hopes that a fragile peace will turn into an elusive political settlement.

The gates of the top-security Maze Prison outside Belfast were opened on the stroke of 8.30 a.m. (GMT) to allow inmates jailed for security offences to go home under new rules relaxing the qualification for remisssion.

A total of 84 prisoners will get early release, equally divided between Catholic Republicans, who fought to end British rule, and Protestant loyalists, who battled to maintain it

Prisoner hanged then burned by inmates in Athens prison riot

ATHENS (R) — A prisoner, probably a foreigner, was hanged and then burned by rioting inmates at Athens maximum security prison, police said Friday.

It was the fourth confirmed death of an inmate since more than 1,000 prisoners seized Korydallos Prison Tuesday. Riot police surrounding the prison recovered the body Friday.

The first three dead to be removed from the prison were all Greeks who died from drug overdoses. Inmates seized the prison hospital at the start of their rampage and gave out drugs held at the facility.

Police said they could see the slumped figures of 10 to 15 more prisoners around the compound but did not know whether they were dead or in a drug-induced clashed inside the front gate and police said they believed some inmates could be injured. Justice Ministry officials said they had no reports of injuries. Police said they were now controlling the administrative offices and heavily guarding all other entrances but would not move further inside the compound unless provoked.

MANILA (AFP) — Suspense turned to relief and embarrassment for police bomb experts after a package they thought contained a bomb was blown open, only to reveal a cat, the official Philippine News Agency said Friday. The report said unidentified men in a jeep left the package, marked "do not open, exclusively" at the door of a shipping firm here. A man telephoned police to say there was a bomb inside the package. Police rushed to examine it with a stethoscope, with a curious crowd in tow. Bomb disposal experts said they heard something moving or ticking inside the package and resorted to using an "electronic-hydraulic dis-ruptor." But after it was blown open, what emerged was a cat which sprinted away from the scene, the MOSCOW (R) - President Boris Yeltsin is increasing his work rate as he recovers from a mild heart attack in October, but he will probably remain in hospital until the end of this month, his chief spokesman said Friday.

TASS quoted Medvedev as saying he understood from the doctors that this meant he would stay in Moscow's Central Clinical Hospital until the

Ex-bodyguard joins Roh in Seoul jail

SEOUL (R) - South prosecutors Friday arrested the former chief bodyguard of ex-President Roh Tae-Woo as Mr. Roh spent his first day in jail on charges of pocketing bribes from business tycoons.

A prosecution official said Lee Hyun-Woo would be held behind bars in the same detention centre as Mr. Roh on several including charges, bribery.

Mr. Lee was arrested after being grilled by state prosecutors for more than 50 hours over his role in managing some of Mr. Roh's $654 million slush

Mr. Roh, the first South Korean head of state, retired or serving to be arrested, was visited Friday by his only son Jae-Hun, who told reporters at the prison gates he was bringing clothes and books for his father.

Mr. Lee is suspected of having taken 2.65 billion won ($3.44 million) from business tycoons in return for giving them favours in lucrative projects.

Prosecutors were expected to soon summon heads of major business groups for a second round the arrest of Mr. Roh. The 1,000-page arrest warrant said Mr. Roh took more than $300 million in bribes from 30 business conglomerates during his 1988-93 term in office in return for hicrative contracts.

"Several heads of business groups cannot escape resummoning," the offical said without elaborating. Mr. Roh tearfully confessed last month to amassing his slush funds and said he still kept $242 million. News reports quoted prison officials as saying that Mr. Roh - now known as Prisoner "100" was relaxing in his cell.

"He went right to bed Yesterday. He must have been tired," state radio quoting a prison official as saving.

Guards are keeping a round-the-clock vigil outside the cell of the retired four-star general, who is expected to spend his 63rd birthday next month behind bars.

Among the business leaders named in the arrest warrant as having given money to Mr. Roh were Kim Woo-Choong, chairman of the mighty Daewoo Group, the counof questioning following try's fourth largest conglomerate. Mr. Kim is accused of giving Mr. Roh 10 billion won ($13 million) in return for a contract to build a submarine

Mr. Kim, who is in Poland on a business trip, was accused of delivering the money to Mr. Rob in his office in the presidential Blue House in May 1991, on two separate occasions. Also named was the chief executive of the Dong Ah Group, a major construction concern. The prosecution official also said they would continue to investigate whether politicians had dipped into Mr. Roh's $654 million slush fund.

Mr. Roh was interrogated by prosecutors for the second time Wednesday, one day after he threatened to spill the beans on his financing of the presidential campaign.

Veteran opposition Kim Dae-Jung has admitted he accepted $2.6 million from mr. Rob and has declared "do or die" war against his archrival, President Kim Young-Sam, who he alleges took hundreds of millions of dollars.

PORT-AU-PRINCE (R) — With 14 candidates lined up for Haiti's presidential election next month, officials have vowed the poll would go ahead despite angry threats against contenders for the top post.

Political activist Rene Preval, 52, emerged as the front-runner for the Dec. 17 election after announcing his candidacy Wednesday with the backing of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's influential Lavalas Movement.

With an estimated 80 per cent of the electorate loyal to Lavalas, analysts said it was almost inevitable that Mr. Preval would be Haiti's next president. "Whoever Aristide designates is certain to win," a Western diplomat said.

Sri Lanka ponders move as troops mass for Jaffna

COLOMBO (R) — The Sri and east for minority dered its next move Friday towards ending the country's long-running ethnic war while the army was poised to enter the northern rebel city of Jaffna.

Diplomats, noting that the eventual fall of the Tamil Tiger stronghold would be a major military success, said the government must refocus on a political solution to bring peace to this tropical South Asian nation.

"For the government, the question is how it proposes to use its spectacular success to move on towards a political solution to end the war," one Western ambassador told Reuters.

Government sources said President Chandrika Bandaranaike Kumaratunga had held talks with her defence advisers Thursday about the political and security implications of an army victory in Jaffna.

On Friday, the army said there had been no developments since reporting that its forces were one kilometre from the city limits of Jaffna Thursday.

"No major incidents have been reported from the operational area," a one-line army statement said.

The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE), however, said they were holding back the army's advance with a spirited defence. A statement faxed to Reuters late Thursday did not comment on the army's claim it was one kilometre from Jaffna's limits.

Some Western diplomats have argued that the government stands to lose, not gain, if troops occupy the rebel Jaffna bastion, saying the victory would be more symbolic than real.

Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike told Reuters in an interview before the start of the army campaign on Oct. 17 that the government's objective was to "soften the LTTE" to bring them to the negotiating table to hold peace talks. But diplomats questioned whether this was working. "If the objective was to soften the LTTE, it does not seem to be working," one diplomat said. "Going by the recent bomb blasts in Colombo, and the massive recruitment drive for new and younger cadres, the rebels seem to have only hardened their position if anything."

The question of what will happen after Jaffna falls appears to have set off security alerts in Colombo, where the government stepped up patrols around buildings government

The government was also grappling with a humanitarian problem Friday. Officials estimate at least 100,000 refugees had arrived at poorly equipped camps in relatively safer areas of the predominantly Tamil north.

Some aid workers say the number of displaced people could be higher than 400,000. The government says it has rushed relief supplies to the refugee camps, but the guerrillas and the army have accused each other of cornering materi-

Meanwhile Mrs. Bandaranaike has blasted fellow MPs for bickering and fighting in parliament, warning that it could lead to an insurrection, newspapers said Friday.

Mrs. Bandaranaike, 79. said in a statement Thursday that MPs were using "indecent language, hurling abuses at each other and fighting among themselves rather than setting better standards."

Mrs. Bandaranaike said she often skipped parliament because she was ashamed to hear "indecent language" in the house.

Human life above political sovereignty

THE OUTRAGE with which the international community has reacted to Nigeria's execution of nine human rights activists reflects a growing trend towards responding against human right violations with more vigour, more determination and more effectiveness.

This trend should be encouraged, strengthened and translated into binding international conventions despite the opposition of a few isolated governments that might decry this as an encroachment on their sovereignty.

Arguments that world action against human right violations in certain countries amounts to intervention in the domestic affairs of sovereignty states smack with anachronism. Humans are humans regardless of where they live and who are their prosecutors. Those who suffer at the hands of regimes that disregard people's human rights are entitled to the same protection that victims of war receive.

The world has established the concept of deploying United Nations forces to protect civilians in war zones. It must also consolidate the right of civilians to international protection if their human rights are being violated, even if at the hands of their own government. A flawed logic is that which rejects the killing and torture of people by foreign powers and apologises for or justifies the infliction of suffering on them by their own governments. The international community has often committed itself and its agencies to the protection of international justice. It must not shy away from saying bluntly that it will not allow any government to deny its citizens their rights as human beings.

Human rights is an issue that should transcend political borders. Respect for human dignity must take precedence over the respect for political sovereignty. As the international community stands against the transgression on political borders by foreigners, it must reject the violation of human rights by regimes that govern by fear and against the will of their subjects.

The United Nations justifies the launching of war to protect peoples from invading armies. It is time it adopted similar legislation against the murder of people by their governments. The world should not just condemn human rights violations, it must act against them wherever they occur and no matter who the oppressor is. Human life should be more valuable than lines in the sand.

ARABIC PRESS COMMENTARIES

MOHAMMAD SUBEIHI, a writer in Al Dustour, said that the Muslim Brotherhood group in Jordan were wrong in suing Khaled Kasabeh, the editor of the weekly Al Bilad, for alleged charges that he had tarnished the image of Islam. By so doing, said the writer, the Muslim Brotherhood has done a great service to the government which was seeking excuses to suppress the weekly press. It would be difficult for the Islamic Action Front members of Parliament to stand in the way of government-backed amendments to the Press and Publications Law and the imposition of further constraints on the local press from now on, said the writer. He said that the Muslim Brotherhood should have complained to the weekly Al Bilad about what it considered immoral or anti-religious and demanded that such acts must stop. While admitting that the weekly press in Jordan has blundered on numerous occasions, one should also confess that the weekly press has been successful in drawing public attention to serious issues and has been able to reach other Arab and foreign rountries presenting information that reflect the positive d negative aspects of Jordanian life, added the writer. He I what is needed now is an open dialogue between the dia on the one hand and the government and other position parties on the other and also an internal nalogue within the media community to be led by the ordan Press Association which can steer the local press in manner that would be fair to all sides and serving the journalists and their profession.

EXPRESSING TOTAL outrage over the car-bomb explosi r in Riyadh this week, a writer in Al Ra'i said that such inal action can never achieve the objectives of their errators but rather help to expose them as terrorists anti-human. The terrorist explosion, like similar as in other Arab countries, are bound to win ale public anger and outrage and encourage govern-... to step up their efforts and to collaborate to crack own hard on the terrorists and their supporters and those ho finance their operations, said Mahmoud Rimawi. The riter said opting for criminal and terrorist actions ather that alogue and democratic means to find solutions to internal problems, the extremist elements are eading to ords total failure and complete frustration and eventually total elimination.

Jordanian Perspective

Time for change in inter-Arab relations

JORDAN'S RELATIONS with the Arab Gulf states are in a continuous process of improvement, as witnessed in last week's visit by His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan to Bahrain and the arrival in Amman of a new Saudi ambassador after a four-year hiatus. The improvement in ties is only a natural course of events. correcting an abnormal situation in the Arab World, given Jordan's consistent policy of cooperating with all Arab countries and sharing in the Arab World's good and bad days.

Beyond the diplomatic niceties and protocol, what we in Jordan would like to see is a heightened awareness among all Arab countries of the need to stick together rather than allowing themselves to be carried by the current of the day and fall victim to external pressures designed to serve external interests.

If we were to look at Jordan's relations with the members of the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), we could see clearly that there is no hard and fast rule that sets a framework for GCC ties with other Arab countries. For instance, Jordan's relations with the Sultanate of Oman could never be described as having been strained despite the difference in views Amman and Muscat had over the Gulf crisis.

If we come to Qatar, one could see that Doha was first among the rest of the GCC countries to understand and appreciate that Jordan's position during the Gulf crisis had much more than just a refusal to endorse a military option to end the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait but was based on a realisation that war would not have solved the root problem, and, if anything, would only bring about more confusion and chaos which do not serve Arab interests at large. Sure enough, the situation today speaks for itself of what Jordan had warned everyone five years back.

Let us take the position of the United Arab Emirates (UAE). The call by the president of the UAE. Sheikh Zayed Ben Sultan Al Nahayan, for Arab reconciliation and an end to the suffering of the people of Iraq did not come out of a vacuum but out of a clear realisation and appreciation of the fact that there is something seriously wrong with the situation in the Arab World. Judging from the record of the UAE in pan-Arab affairs, it is also clear that Abu Dhabi also understands that disarray is the last thing that the Arab World could afford today, given the pressing need to coordinate positions with a clear vision for future as the politics in the region and international scenes are shifting.

We are being told that the government of Kuwait is in favour of restoring relations with Jordan but it is facing opposition from its parliament and a segment of its people. As such, the reopening of the Jordanian embassy in Kuwait and the upgrading of Kuwaiti diplomatic presence in Amman to ambassadorial level are in the backburner, we are told. Well, it is an internal issue that affects the brotherly state of Kuwait, and we in Jordan can only offer to do what we could to help advance the process of normalisation of relations and cannot play a direct role in influencing Kuwaiti thinking. Things will return to normal in their own course as the political shape of the region is being redrawn and awareness increases of the pressing need for Arabs to get together and a chart a course that would safeguard Arab interests. The Arab-Israeli conflict, one of the perennial features of Arab politics, is slowly on its way out, and new economic realities are being created in the region. Against that backdrop, if Arab countries remained at odds with each other the only losers will be Arabs themselves to the benefit of external forces, which, for long, have coveted the Arab oil wealth and sought to dominate the Arab World.

That has precisely been Jordan's message, implicit and explicit, to the Arab World for decades, but very few actually acted in response to that message while others paid just lipservice to the concept of Arah collective action. It could be said that some Arab countries which enjoy huge oil wealth have no reason to lament the absence of joint Arab moves since they do not have any immediate problems in terms of internal pressures. They have enough oil revenues to continuously upgrade the living standards of their people and, for all technical purposes, their vision does not seem to go beyond the oil years. But is that all there is to it? Definitely, no one can actually overlook that living off the oil wealth without actually planning carefully for future does not bode well for the future

In this context, the arrival here last week of Saudi Ambassador Abdullah Soudairi is very encouraging. The Saudi foreign minister, Prince Saud Al Faisal, is expected here around Nov. 25, and Prince Saud's visit is in turn expected to lead to setting a date for a summit meeting between His Majesty King Hussein and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia.

For us in Jordan, the expected Hussein-Fahd summit represents a watershed if only because of the possibility that the meeting could be the launching pad for a new Arab awakening to the changing realities on the ground in the Middle East and realisation of the pressing need to adopt collective action. What is important, however, is accepting that the situation in the Arab World today cannot be and should not be allowed to continue.

Writers extol King's achievements, explore post-Rabin Israel

Reviewed by Elia Nasrallah

EDITORIALS AND articles in the local press focused attention on His Majesty King Hussein's 60th birthday and the King's address in which he criticised the press; as well as development in Israel and the occupied territories after Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's assassination and a host of pan-Arab and domestic affairs.

Jordanians have reason to rejoice on the King's birthday to celebrate the numerous achievements they made over the past decades under King Hussein's reign, said Mahmoud Rimawi, a writer in Al Ra'i daily. From a poor country with limited resources Jordan has been transformed under King Hussein into a modern state with marked progress in various fields. said the writer. For the Jordanian citizens the King's 60th birthday is a real occarion to celebrate because they remember the struggle King Hussein had waged in order to serve his country and people as they look forward with great hope towards further progress and prosperity in the peace era.

King Hussein's birthday marks a milestone in the march towards development in Jordan under King Hussein who spared no effort in leading his countrymen towards modernisation and progress in every field, said Mohammad Qadah, a writer in Al Ra'i. As Jordanians look back on the past decades they feel content with what their country has achieved and they take pride in the King's leadership and in the steps he has taken to enhance democracy and political pluralism, said the writer. Indeed, King Hussein's efforts over the past years have helped make Jordan an oasis of stability and security in a turbulent region, he added. Referring to King Hussein's criticism of "irresponsible press," Sultan Hattab said that the King was never so angry as he was during his latest speech to senior army officers at the King Hussein Medical Centre. The columnist, who writes for the Al Ra'i, said that King Hussein was not happy because some writers had crossed the red lines. defied the law and violated the National Charter and the Constitution with their writings. By calling on the silent majority to speak up in support of what is right and just and by criticising those elements that do harm to the country, the King wanted to put matters right and to sound the alarm lest the forces of evil succeed in leading the country astray, said the writer. As he always does, the King has pointed to areas where corruption existed and where hostile forces have been acting in the dark to harm the country's demo-

стасу.

A writer in Al Dustour supported the King's views that professional associations should dedicate their efforts to promoting their professions rather than deive into politics. Taher Al Adwan said that politics should be left to the political parties and the Parliament to handle and the unions ought to serve their country by improving the quality of services to the public. King Hussein has rightly criticised those weekly tabloids which he said have crossed the red lines with their irresponsible and sensational writings that tend to harm national unity on the hand and smear the Kingdom's image before the world on the other, the writer said.

Yousef Abdullah Mahmoud, a writer in A! Ra'i, said that some elements have been exploiting democracy as a means to harm national unity and abusing the climate of freedom of expression which the country has enjoyed over the past years. The writer said that the King was right in criticising these elements which do not respect values and principles and are proving to be ungrateful to their country and nation. No doubt said the writer, the King was referring to forces hostile to national unity and those which use their pens to harm the country's demo-

In the view of Mohammad Barhouma, a writer in Al Ra'i, the assassination of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin is bound to enhance the Labour Party's position and its drive to attain a comprehensive peace on all tracks. The writer said that the ruling Labour government will have greater space for political manoeuvres and for winning greater support for its policies especially as the Israeli society has condemned extremists and those behind them and are in favour of the Labour Party's peace endeavours. By including former army chief of staff Ehud Barak in a senior Post: in the government the ruling Labour Party is bound to win support for its policies from the Israeli military institution which wields great power in Israel, he added. A writer in Al Dustour supported this view and said that peace in the region is backed by the world community and not only the countries involved in the Middle East conflict. Ali Safadi said that the killing of Yitzhak Rabin was aimed at putting back all steps taken towards peace and the return of the Palestinian land occupied since 1957. Forces hostile to peace and security are now, rendered weak and unable to stop the overwhelming support for the Israeli govemment's drive to attain peace with the Arabs. The writer said that the world leaders that converged on Israel to attend Rabin's funeral carried a message which said that the whole world is behind the peace

Now that Shimon Peres has been entrusted to form a new government in Israel, it would not be long before we will know the cabinet setup and its plans with regard to the peace process.

efforts and is ready to back

these efforts by all possible

said Taher Adwan a writer in Al Dustour. If Peres chooses to give priority to winning support for his Labour Party in the coming parliamentary elections, he ought to carry out Rabin's plans and honour his party's commitment to the achievement of comprehensive peace as was promised by this government in the previous elections, said the writer. But if Peres neglected the peace question especially with the Palestinians and the Syrians and focused his attention on internal affairs only, the results of the coming elections could not be favourable for his party and the future of peace. A writer in Al Ra'i said that it was the first time for all parties in Israel to show unanimity over entrusting a particular figure to form a new government. Ghazi Saadi said that this gives impetus to the peace process which was spearheaded by Rabin and Peres together. The writer said that since Israel is governed by institutions and not individuals the peace process charted by the Labour government is bound to continue especially as the process has been backed overwhelmingly by the world community. The writer expressed the view that the Peres government will not face any real opposition in parliament and will therefore continue the process of army redeployment in the West Bank, and there is no doubt that the Israelis will enter the final stage of the peace negotiations with the Palestinians in May

A writer in Al Dustour said that Jordan is in dire need of stringent plans to control excessive public spending because of the country's meagre resources and its need for funds to finance development proiects. Taher Adwan said that the ever and continual rise in prices of consumer products and the inability of limited income and low income groups to cope with the situation has rendered most of the Jordanian people living at or below the poverty line.

Struggle on in Labour Party

By Howard Goller Reuter

TEL AVIV - The struggle for Yitzhak Rabin's legacy has begun in Israel's Labour Party, pitting a respected former army chief against a political maverick. Acting Prime Minister Shimon Peres, 72, is expected to form a govern-

Labour into elections scheduled for next October. But as Mr. Peres moves up, taking over from his slain gray-haired comrade, two younger men are vying for the power that might enable one of them ultimately to lead the country.

ment by next week and lead

The two are Interior Minister Ehud Barak, a 53year-old retired general. and Haim Ramon, the 45-year-old leader of Israel's Histadrut trade union fed-

Israeli newspapers were full of speculation about which jobs Mr. Peres would give them both as the country emerged from the shock and sorrow of Mr. Rabin's killing 10 days ago by a Jewish gunman.

It remains to be seen how each would affect peace

'Neither has been very involved in peacemaking with the Palestinians," said diplomatic correspondent David Makovsky of the Jerusalem Post.

"However, Barak may bring rabinesque caution to the process while Ramon could be an unflinching backer of Peres and his policies," Mr. Makovsky

Yet another power seek-er is 47-year-old economics minister Yossi Beilin, Mr. Peres's longtime adviser who was key to secret peace moves that led to a breakthrough with the PLO.

Mr. Beilin said the most important thing for him was to help the peace process "in whatever function" but he could be a factor in belping to ease the way for either of the other two

Mr. Peres, who along with Mr. Rabin kept younger men out of the top jobs has been cagey about with whom he would like to share his power.

"I can see so many candidates that I wouldn't like to pick out one." Mr. Peres told the Cable News Network (CNN) on Tuesday.

Most of the speculation this week has focused on Mr. Barak, a soldier for most of 35 years — longer even than Mr. Rabin. Commentator Nahum

A nationwide affection

THE WHOLE nation marked His Majesty King Hussein's 60th birthday with so much joy and spontancity. The festive mood radiated into the home and hearts of every Jordanian. However, amid the feelings of admiration, respect and dedication, certainly one feeling was dominant: Love, stemming from the very hearts of ordinary people for their leader, who dedicated his life for the betterment of his nation and led it to where it is now. Love and devotion, what marvelous gifts to offer on such a special occasion?

As a foreigner who spent the last 20 years in Jordan, I proudly feel a part of the large Jordanian family, and wish to thank all those who made it possible for me to feel that way. I am sure that many sharing my fate, would also share this feeling of belonging, to a land and peoples that once seemed to be remote and strange. We do rejoice over every single step taken forward in the direction of development and advancement, and objectively assess the enormous progress Jordan has achieved in all spheres of its social life, especially on matters related to the status of women.

I wouldn't like to think how better this world have been a long time ago, if women had a greater role to play in the process of decision making. Yet, it is a wonderful and powerful truth, that women have a lot to offer. Thanks to His Majesty's vision and philosophy that political stability cannot be achieved without social stability, women's presence and active participation in all aspects of our lives have become a reality today. His Majesty's personal encouragement and support will certainly enhance even further the importance of the female factor as an essential element in community life that has become instrumental in the process of transformation dreams

Israeli aviation team visits Qatar

DOHA (AFP) — An Israeli delegation arrived in Qatar on Friday to sign an accord setting up air links for the first time between the Jewish state and a Gulf Arab country, a diplomat here said. Qatar does not have diplomatic ties with Israel but contacts between the two countries have been on the rise and economic links are already in the pipeline. The Israeli civil aviation delegation, headed by Menchem Sharon, arrived in Doha on board a plane of the national carrier Qatar Airways, the diplomat said, asking not to be named. As the two countries draw closer to formal relations, Information minister Hamad Abdel Aziz Al-Kawari represented Qatar at the state funeral of Israel's slain prime minister Yitzhak Rabin in Jerusalem on Nov. 6. Qatar's interior and foreign ministers met Rabin himself in New York in October. PARIS (AFP) - Former French President Francois Mitterrand will have to cancel his attendance at an award ceremony scheduled for next Thursday because of his prostate cancer, the expresident's aides said here Friday. Mr. Mitterrand was to have handed the 1995 Prize of the German Media, which he won last year, to Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) leader Yasser Arafat at a ceremony in Baden Baden, Germany. The ceremony will also posthumuously honour assassinated Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, named in October as the co-winner with the PLO leader of this year's award for "exceptional people." Traditionally, the award is presented by the previous year's winner.

Oman girds for sultan's silver jubilee

By Barry May Reuter

MUSCAT - Qaboos Bin Said grew up in an Arabian nights land of royal privilege and mediaeval priva-

Radio, spectacles and trousers were banned, the gates of the walled city of Muscat were closed from dusk to dawn, no cars drove on the 11 km of roads, and there were few telephones, three schools and one hospital.

As Sultan of Oman, he now rules a country whose judicious investment of its oil wealth has enabled it to leap in one generation from an archaic backwater where slavery was common to a rich oil economy with all the trappings of a modern state.

The sparsely populated country, a land of much scenic beauty and cultural wealth, plans to celebrate his 55th birthday on Saturday as Oman's National Day and silver jubilee.

With its northern neighbour Iran across the Strait of Hormuz, Oman controls the strategic mouth of the Gulf through which half the world's oil is exported by tanker.

Oman's stability as an independent oil producer with daily output of 800,000 barrels is thus of vital interest to energy consumers in the West and in Asia, in particular Japan.

Qaboos' father, Sultan Said Ben Taimur, was overthrown in 1970 after decades of arch-reactionary rule and died two years later in exiled in London. Accounts at the time described the succession as a palace coup. Oman says he abdicated.

Sultan Qaboos, eighth descendant of a dynasty that has reigned over Oman since 1744, was 29. Trained at Britain's Sandhurst Military Academy, his first priority was to end a protracted insurgency backed by Marxist-ruled South Yemen in the southern province of Dhofar. Britain, Iran and Jordan provided military help.

The Sultan then set about ending the country's isolation and transforming it by putting in place basic elements of a social and economic infrastructure -housing, education, hospitals and communications which had been resisted by

At the same time Sultan Oaboos pursued an independent foreign policy which led to his meeting late Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Oman last year.

Recently he agreed to exchange trade offices with Israel, enabling the Jewish state to establish its first presence in any Gulf state.. although analysts said it was too soon to talk of diplomatic relations.

While most of Oman's development of the past 25 years was financed by oil revenues, Sultan Qaboos seeks diversification of the economy away from overdependence on oil.

He sees the private sector undertaking the greatest role in the country's next five-year plan starting in 1996.

"Our future plan is based on harmony between revenue and spending and keeping the necessary balance between them." Sultan said earlier this

As absolute monarch he has presided over cabinet meetings and acted as his own prime minister, minister of defence and minister of foreign affairs since 1971.

Two months ago Sultan Oaboos had a close brush with death in a traffic accident in which the architect of the country's financial policies was killed.

Qais Ben Abdulmonim Al Zawai, deputy prime minister for financial and economic affairs, died when a car struck the Sultan's vehicle during a tour of Dhofar province. The Sultan escaped serious injury. Camels and cattle were sacrificed at the hospital gates by citizens who had kept vigil during his overnight stay for

APEC dodges bullet, keeps | Lebanon expects free trade plan momentum

OSAKA, Japan (R) — The Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum dodged a potentially lethal bullet at its annual meeting on Friday and kept intact a vision of a vast free trade area evolving in the next quarter century.

At the end of its annual two-day meeting, APEC foreign and trade ministers agreed the world's fastestgrowing region would open all economic sectors, without exception, to free trade.

And they agreed to make immediate "down-payments" on their liberalisation plans, which will be disclosed at the APEC leaders' summit on Sunday at the medieval Osa-

Delegates said the agree-ment, a language minefield, kept going momentum started three years ago when President Bill Clinton hosted the first leaders summit in

In a joint statement in Osaka, the ministers reaffirmed the goals and timetable of the so-called Bogor Declaration made in Indonesia last year at APEC's second summit.

The leaders agreed last year to bring their free trade plan into effect by the year 2010 for developed countries and by 2020 for developing

Other members, who together account for nearly half of the world's trade, said use of the word "voluntary" was not a sign of weakening resolve and was not an issue for any other country.

Before the meeting, Japan. China and South Korea called for agriculture to receive "special treatment" in the APEC agenda.

Other members were adamantly opposed, saying that giving special treatment to one country's sector meant doing the same for any sensitive sector in the other member economies and would cause APEC to unravel.

Under the compromise hammered out, members agreed to open all market sectors, although they will have "flexibility" in how and when this will be done.

Still, each country is required to make its "downpayment" on liberalisation by announcing initial marketopening measures at Sunday's summit, the first scrawls on the so-called "blueprint" for Asia-Pacific free trade.

Most are expected to announce measures that have already been taken or have already been announced. But some may use the occasion to unveil genuinely new re-

'We will be allowed to keep some customs duties for a few years, and when emergencies occur we will be allowed to suspend some parts of the agreement to deal with them," Mr. Hassan

After implementing the agreement the two sides will meet every five years to assess results and take any steps needed to balance the relationship.

This will include adjusting the compensation Lebanon will receive for loss of customs revenue and increased competition for its enterprises, Mr. Hassan said.

"We will use the assistance that is offered - technical help, investments and financial aid and grants — to help increase productivity in industry and agriculture and improve the quality of products," he added.

Lebanon will also receive help in developing its internal fiscal system to offset loss of customs revenue by introducing a value added tax (VAT).

Bank sees 3-year EU currency birth with dual system at outset

FRANKFURT (AFP) -The birth of the new single European currency should last three years and end with twin usage of old and new notes for six months from Jan. 1, 2002, the European Union's (EU's) future central bank has said.

The proposals, by the European Monetary Institute (EMI), were essentially in step with a plan by the EU Commission which was published in May.
The timetable did not pick up an initial preference by the Bundesbank for a socalled delayed big-bang approach under which most of the transitional changes would occur together after a lengthy preparatory period to avoid the burden for banks of double accounting.

The Bundesbank has since qualified this approach, saying that opinion among German banks was divided.

But the EMI's proposals coincided with a warning byfive advisors to the German government that the whole programme might have to be delayed if insufficient countries met qualifying condi-

The so-called five wise men, echoing the official German view, stressed that the timetable must depend wholly on the achievement of the qualifying conditions. They also said that if the currency could not be launched in 1999, a qualifying founding quorum could be approved later.

The advisors further noted that the only EU countries which currently fulfills the Maastricht criteria for membership of the single currency is tiny Luxembourg. Even Germany is outside the limit for the ratio between budget deficits and gross domestic product.

The president of the EMI, Alexandre Lamfalussy, backed the thinking behind recent calls by German Finance Minister Theo Waigel for participants to agree a socalled stability pact, and stressed that the whole endeavour depended upon careful selection of which countries qualified under the terms of the Maastricht trea-currency until the transition had been completed. Its proposals for the transition by the EMI laid down three distinct stages and four key dates. The process would have to be "relatively simple and easy" if the change were to be credible to the public, the EMI said.

The main preparations would begin early in 1998 and the formal process would last from Jan. 1, 1999, as laid down under the Maastricht treaty, until July 1, 2002. The proposals are to be discussed by heads of state and government from members of the EU at a European Council meeting in Madrid in December.

Countries participating in the launch would also introduce legislation to enact outstanding commitments under the treaty of Maastricht.

The second stage would begin on Jan. 1, 1999 with the launch of the third stage of EMU. This would be marked by the irrevocable fixing of exchange rates of the currencies of participating countries and would last for a maximum of three years, the EMI

This plan is intended to ensure rapid and widespread use of the single currency for professional non-cash transactions so as to render the process irreversible.

National central banks and the future European central bank would enact monetary policy in the single currency and would promote the new currency on international foreign exchange markets. The third stage, on Jan. 1, 2002, would mark the most tangible step for the public since it would be the date of the issue into circulation of notes and coins. Old and new currencies would exist side by side for six months.

From July 1, 2002 national currency in participating countries would no longer be legal tender and would live to be changed for the new currency.

Refinery company opens three Investors to establish news contres to distribute gas new insurance companies cylinders

¢¢ THREE NEW centres at Marka, Um Al Hiran and Al Misdar in Amman governorate will be selling gas cylinders at the official prices of JD 18.5 each starting Saturday (today), the general manager of the Jordan Petroleum Refinery Company has said. The new centres will be in addition to the distribution centre in the governorate of Zarqa and the Nusimeh station in Irbid governorate. The general manager said the company has purchased 14,000 tonnes of gas which will be arriving by land and sea over the coming ten days. The amount is in addition to the 450 tonnes of gas produced by the refinery and the 100 tonnes imported daily from Iraq, he added. The refinery chief noted that Jordan's gas consumption during the winter season amounts to 900 tonnes a day, double the quantity consumed under normal circumstances during other months. He indicated that the refinery will import 150,000 empty gas cylinders in addition to the 800 cylinders the company manufactures each day and nearly 200 worn out cylinders which are repaired daily (Al Ra'i).

Mistrial declared in Don King fraud case

insurance fraud trial on Thursday after the jury said it was deadlocked. but an appeals court quickly stopped him from releasing the jury.

In a bizarre courtroom drama. U.S. district judge Lawr-ence McKenna told the jury it must return on Friday morning despite his ruling. After the jury left for the day. McKenna told a packed courtroom that the second circuit of appeals would decide early on Friday whether he should have instructed the panel to keep deliberating.

Earlier. McKenna took the unusual step of declaring the mistrial after the jury told him it could not reach a verdict. Normally after the first such notification, a judge will deliver what is called the "Allen Charge" which in-structs the panel to keep trying. McKenna's ruling was also unusual in that the jury has deliberated for only about 10 hours since it received the case late on Monday.

The judge said the jury was "irretrievably deadlocked" and it would be unfair to pressure them to reach a decision because one panellist could not remain past noon on Friday. It was unclear why the deliberations could not continue with 11 jurors or an alternate. All 12 are to return on Friday.

In a note declaring its deadlock, the jury said:
"Certain members of the jury, a majority, have reached the conclusion that we are irretrievably dead-

NEW YORK (R) — A federal judge declared a mistrial in boxing promoter Don King's on any of the counts charged. Federal prosecutors immediately asked the appeals to stop the judge from dismissing the jury. King has been on trial since Sept. 21 for nine counts of insurance fraud involving a 1991 Julio Cesar Chavez fight that was cancelled. Each count against him carries a maximum five-year prison sentence and a $250,000 fine.

King, the world's foremost boxing promoter, is accused of padding his claim submitted to Lloyd's of London with $350,000 in training fee losses that did not occur. The insurance contract covered nonrefundable expenses and Lloyd's paid King a total of S671,000.

Although witnesses said King keeps tight control over his company, insisting on signing cheques for as little as five cents, the promoter testi-fied he had nothing to do with the filing of the claim.

His lawyer argued that King was too busy with other concerned with the rape charges against one of his other boxers. Mike Tyson to care about collecting the insurance claim.

Chavez was scheduled to fight Harold Brazier in 1991 in Las Vegas, but Chavez was injured before the fight and it was cancelled. King allegedly that included $350.00 in training fees for Chavez.

Prosecutors allege that King never told Chavez ab-out the $350,000 insurance claim and illegally pocketed

Weightlifting Championships lift off into drug cloud

GUANGZHOU, China (AFP) — A mass doping scandal marred the start of the World Weightlifting Championships here Friday as the international governing body banned 64 lifters for life for drugtaking.

The 64 athletes from 31 countries who have tested positive this year — all but two for anabolic steroids — have been notified through their national federations, said International Weighthifting Federation general secretary Tamas Ajan, who provided no names.

Weightlifting is the only Olympic sport that bans drug offenders for life for a first offence.

The IWF decided only after a long discussion at an executive board meeting Wednesday to accept the Cologne results because of the controversial equipment used, said Ajan.

Only the IWF is currently using the new more sensitive equipment for its drug testing, said Ajan.

But if using the equipment exposes weightlifting to attack as a "dirty" sport, then "our reaction is not to use this equipment, but it doesn't make a clean sport," said Ajan.

More than 25 and control the 64 contribut tests were detected. More than 85 per cent of the 64 positive tests were detected by costly new equipment at a drug-testing laboratory in Cologne, Germany, said Ajan. The highly sensitive new equipment can detect drugs taken two or even three months previously, he said. Standard equipment can generally detect drugs taken only within the previous three weeks.

Only 17 lifters tested positive for banned drugs last year.

"This year the Cologne lab used a very special, highly ensitive mass spectrometer, which had never been used Four countries with more than two positive tests — Bulgaria, Kazakhstan, Russia and Armenia — paid $50,000 lines to be allowed to compete here and at the Atlanta refore," said Ajan.

Olympics next year.

According to IWF rules, countries with three or more positive tests within a year are suspended from competition for positive tests within a year are suspended from competition for 12 months or must pay a 50,000 fine. All doping tests carried out at the world championships, which have attracted 497 competitors from 75 countries, will be analysed at the Colonge lab, said Ajan. Results will be The top eight finishers from the Guangzhou championships will qualify to send a full team of 10 lifters to the Atlanta available next month.

The IWF has so far conducted 1,031 tests in 91 countries this year, including 400 unannounced out-of-competition tests.

The IWF has asked the IOC to use the equipment at all its accredited labs and at the Atlanta Olympics.

Graf reaches WTA tour semifinals

NEW YORK (AFP) -World number one Steffi Graf advanced to the semifinals of the $2 million WTA Tour Championships here on Thursday with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over American Mary joe Fernandez.

Fernandez put up stiff re-sistance, but failed in her bid to claim her first victory over Graf in 13 matches.

"It was very even," Graf said: "Her type of game I like to play against. Even though she is aggressive at times, she still gives me time. She requires more time to set up than some other players."

Graf, a three-time winner of the season-ending event, needed only an hour and a quarter to beat Fernandez. In the evening's other quarterfinal, her unseeded compatriot Anke Huber beat sixthseeded Kimiko Date of Japan

3-6, 6-2, 6-1.
"I think again my serve was very important," Graf said. "I've been very steady. I've been mixing it up quite well. I also played well on the important points."

Graf saved three break points in the fifth game of the opening set and came back to break Fernandez in the next game for a 4-2 lead. She set up break point with a backhand cross-court passing shot and won the game as Fernandez hit a forehand wide. Graf served out the next game at love and closed the set two games later as her backhand clipped the top of the net and trickled over on set point.

"It was going back and forth until that moment," Graf said of the fifth and sixth games. "We both served very well, so we didn't give each other many oppor-

"Although I served well, hers is bigger," Fernandez said, "I wasn't able to get too many opportunities. Against a player like Steffi, if you don't convert right away you

Graf recorded the second and final service break on the hand return over the head of the charging Fernandez to set up break point and took a 5-4 lead when Fernandez pushed a backhand volley wide.

In the next game Graf finished off Fernandez with an overhand smash into the open court.

Red Sox 1st baseman gets MVP award

NEW YORK (R) — Boston Red Sox first baseman Mo Vaughn has named the American League's Most Valuable Player on Thursday, edging Cleveland Indi-ans outhelder Albert Belle in one of the closest votes in history.

Vaughn received 12 first place votes, 12 seconds and four thirds for a total of 308 points in balloting by a 28-member panel of the Baseball Writers Association of Belle received 11 first place votes, 10 seconds and seven thirds for 300 points. Seattle Mariners designated hitter Edgar Martinez was third with 244 points, and Cleveland Indians reliever Jose Mesa was fourth.

"It's tremendous to get an award like this," said Vaughn, "It still hasn't hit me yet. I never got excited about the MVP Award. I never really was thinking about it."

The election was the closest in the MVP race since 1979, when Keith Hernandez of St. Louis and Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh tied for the National League award.

Vaughn and Belle tied for the league lead with 126 runs batted in.

Vaughn hit .300 with 39 home runs and helped the Red Sox to the Eastern Division title. Belle led the league with 50 homers in powering the Indians to the American League pennant and became the eighth player in Major League history to have 100 extra-base hits in one season. Belle also became the first player in history to have 50 or more homers and doubles in the same season.

keep Browns name

CLEVELAND (R) — If the Cleveland Browns move to Baltimore, the National Football League team will have to get a new name, the city of Cleveland said on Thursday. The city said it filed a suit in federal court here contending the Browns name has been associated with

Cleveland longer than with its current owners, and can't be Cleveland Browns majority owner Art Modell announced last week he will move the National Football League team to Baltimore next season if the move is approved by other NFL team owners. Modell bought a majority interest in the team in 1961 and obtained a trademark registration on the name "Browns" in 1983, the city said. But the city's lawyer Terence Clark said that "since 1946, the terms "Cleveland" and "the Browns" have been inseparably connected. Cleveland wants to keep the name

- and under the law they are entitled to do so." The city says the Browns improperly obtained the registration for the name in 1983, adding that there was extensive use of the names before Modell tried to register

In a year that has seen owners shifting lucrative NFL Franchises across the country, the federal case is the latest shot from Cleveland. A local judge has a hearing scheduled Monday in a separate state court suit that seeks to hold the Browns to a lease at Cleveland stadium through 1998.

Cleveland would like to keep the Browns in town, find investors who could buy out Modell's interest in the Browns or attract another NFL team. The mayor, who like many Browns fans here has taken the petitions on their walls. Some companies have cancelled advertising at Cleveland stadium and on radio and televisions during the Browns' remaining six games — including the Cleveland clinic foundation, an internationally renowned hospital where Modell is a trustee.

Croatia, Serbia ready to normalise relations

Croatia and Serbia - the two key rivals at the start of the Yugoslav wars — have drafted an agreement normalising bilateral relations. Croatian President Franjo Tudiman said Friday.

The agreement on the "complete normalisation of relations between Croatia and Serbia" has been prepared at U.S.-sponsored peace talks in Dayton, Ohio. and will be signed after an agreement is made on Bosnia and a decision has been made to lift international sanctions against Belgrade, Mr. Tudjman told Croatian television.

Mr. Tudjman and Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, whom many see as the mastermind behind the fighting that has devastated former Yugoslavia since 1991, earlier this month at Dayton agreed to work personally to normalise relations between their two countries. The last obstacle to normalising relations appeared to be swept away last weekend when separatist Serbs in the last rebel-held area of Croatia agreed to reincorporation into Croatia.

Mr. Tudjman said that the "setting up of regular diplomatic relations" would be huge economic importance" for both countries and the entire region, notably because it would open up the possibility of road traffic be-tween southern and central

Meanwhile, a senior French defence official voiced concern about U.S. planning for a Bosnia peace force, warning that failure to disarm the belligerents and a commitment to withdraw U.S. troops after one year could spark renewed fighting on an unprecedented scale.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, was commenting on preparations for a multinational force of 60,000 troops under NATO command to replace United Nations forces under the peace deal being negotiated between Serbia. Bosnia and Croatia at talks in Dayton.

"We are very happy that we will work under a NATO command rather under the United Nations, because if anyone looks for trouble with us under the expected new rules of engagement, they will just be massacred," the French official told reporters.

"But equally, we are telling our American friends they are making a big mistake if they think the way to keep peace is to create military parity between the Muslims and the Serbs.

The answer is not, as the Americans intend, to give the Muslims as many artillery pieces as the Serbs have. but to take away the Serbs' guns." he said.

Denmark in throes of royal wedding fever'

COPENHAGEN (AFP) -

Royal wedding fever that has gripped Denmark for months reaches its climax Saturday when Prince Joachim, younger son of Queen Margrethe, marries Alexandra Manley, a British commoner from Hong Kong. Representatives of the courts of Europe and the flower of Denmark's nobility will be present at the wedding of the 26-year-old prince and his bride, who is five years older, in the chapel of Frederiksborg Castle north of Copenhagen. The couple first met in January 1994 ar a dinner organised by mutual friends in a Chinese restaurant in Hong Kong, where the prince was spending time with the Danish shipping company A.P. Moeller. They became engaged a year later on a holiday in the Philippines and announced it officially last May. Since then the Danish press has devoted pages to the betrothal and the wedding preparations, and both national television channels will devote 26 hours of programming to the marriage ceremony and the events surrounding it. Danish women have copied the future princess's hairstyle, clothes and jewellery and manufacturers have fallen over themselves to produce souvenirs of the occasion and, better still, get the couple to endorse their products. The state's wedding present is the restoration of part of the couple's future home, the 17th century Castle of Schackenborg near the German border, and an estate of 240 hectares (600) acres) of forests and 700' hectares of farmland.

Message in a bottle travels from Sweden to California

LJUNGSKILE, Sweden (AFP) — Two little girls who dropped a message-ina-bottle in a Swedish river two years ago have found a new pen pal — in California, the Swedish News Agency (TT) said Friday. The sisters, aged 10 and 11, put 10 bottles in the Ljungskile River in southwestern Sweden in 1993. hoping to find new pen pals. but eventually gave up hope and forgot about them. Until, that is, a letter arrived from a 13-year old girl in San Francisco, saying she had found one of their bottles on a California beach. According to experts, the bottle must have travelled some 20,000 kilometres, following the Swedish and Norwegian coasts, coasting north along the Russian northern coast and eastward across the Bering Strait towards the United States.

China performs 1st successful heart transplant BEIJING (R) — Chinese doctors have carried out their first successful heart transplant on a 48-year-old government employee, the Xinhua News Agency said Friday. Xia Qiuming and Chen Zidao, heart surgeons at the Number 2 Hospital of the Harbin Medical-Sciences University in northeastern Heilongjiang province, carried out the operation on Nov. 11, Xinhua said. The doctors cut out the whole of the diseased heart of Zhao Chuanjun and directly connected the new heart to Zhao's pulmonary artery and pulmonary vein. Xinhua said. "I feel rather good, I never had such a wonderful breath before." Xinhua quoted Zhao as saying later. The doctors said it was the first such surgery to replace a whole heart in Asia.
